CONTENTS.

ORIGINAL COMMUNICATIONS.

page

MEASE, on snake stones and other remedies in the cure of the bites of venomous animals 1
Lowber, on the morbid appearances after death in yellow fever 16
Outwater's case of worms discharged from the abdomen and vagina 27
Vancleve, on the influenza at Princeton (N. J.) 31
Harrison, on the influenza in Rockingham county (Vir.) 41
Griffith, Dr. E. on correcting the atmosphere of large cities 49
Coxe, on syphilis, succeeded by symptoms of gonorrhœa 55
Klapp, on the modus operandi of cold 60
Woodhouse, on fulminating mercury 68
Woodhouse, on the cooling of water by evaporation 70
Hazletine, on the influenza 73
Jameson, on a case in Hey's Surgery, and on hæmorrhage 81
Clarke, on diseases at Verdun, in France 84
Darlington's observations on diseases in an East India voyage 89
Observations, &c. in reply to Dr. Klapp, on the modus operandi of cold 94
Baldwin's cases and dissections of diseased heart and lungs 97
Hamm, on phthisis pulmonalis cured by mercury 105
Fishback, on the successful treatment of a dropsical enlargement of the body, and of an ulcerated leg 109
Buchanan's speculations on hæmoptysis 111
Sharp, on the influenza 113
Norcum, on the influenza 118

page

Newcomb, on a pin swallowed and extracted from the side 120
Case of anæsthesia and paralysis 121
Woodhouse, on meteoric stones 131
Woodhouse, on the Perkiomen zinc mine, with an analysis of the ore 133
Aspinwall's theory of the seat and causes of diabetes mellitus 137
Reply to Arbuthnot on the agency of cold 140
Seybert's catalogue of American minerals 152
Klapp's case of tetanus successfully treated 160
Stuart, on a worm discharged by the urethra (with an engraving) 172
Rush, on a case of small-pox after variolous inoculation 183
Cutbush, Mr. J. on fulminating mercury, &c. 187
Stearns, on cynanche trachealis 195
Little, on the efficacy of mercury in pulmonary consumption 199
Seybert's experiments to ascertain the purity of the air 201
Eberle, on the discovery of the vaccine disease among the cows, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania 206
Seybert, on the zinc ore 209
Rousseau, on the errors of men of science 216
Arbuthnot, on the stimulant effects of cold 236
Foot's account of an anomalous disease 248
Wilkins, on the oil of the chenopodium anthelminticum 252
Seybert's catalogue of American minerals (continued from page 159) 256

MEDICAL AND PHILOSOPHICAL REGISTER.

Cuthbert's new theory of the tides [1]
Analysis of Willan's description of measles [14]
Wilson, on inoculation of the measles [22]
History of diseases from ancient authors, No. I. Aræteus, on tetanus [24]
Vogel, on the state of mercury, combined with unctuous matters [33]
Method of whitening sponges [35]
Unfortunate case in midwifery [35]
Charge of murder against an accoucheur [39]
Decomposition of the fixed alkalies [40]
Harrup's ideas of atmospheric oxygen, unfounded [43]
Antediluvian vaccination [44]
Prize medal of the Philadelphia Medical Lyceum [44]
Observations on the plagiarisms of the editors of the London Medical and Physical Journal [45]

page
Election of officers of the New York Medical Society [48]
Memoirs of the life and character of John Redman, M. D. [49]
Notice to correspondents [56]
College of Medicine of Maryland [57]
Officers and professors in the college of physicians and surgeons of New York [61]
Remarks deduced from the above [62]
History of diseases from ancient authors—Aræteus, No. 2—Angina [63]
Molleson's observations on quackery [69]
Contrivance for cleanliness and comfort to the bed-ridden, &c. [73]
Duncan, on medical jurisprudence [74]
Hydatids found in the substance of the tibia [83]
Distomus intersectus, a new genus of intestinal worm [84]
French prize question on croup [86]
Corrections, &c. to Davy's experiments on alkalies [86]
New mode of preparing calomel [88]
Further information on the same [89]
Gough's observations on domesticated dormice [90]
Observations on quackery, &c. from the Medical Observer [91]
Camphorated water in diseases of the bladder [96]
Virgula divinatoria [97]
A new varnish [98]
Statement of deaths in Philadelphia, during 1807 [100]
Fac similes of old physicians, with an engraving [102]
Statement of the introduction of small-pox into Dover, Delaware, by Dr. Hamm [103]
Home, on a more direct course to the kidneys [104]
Notice of plagiarism by the London Medical and Physical Journal [104]
Notice to correspondents [104]
Observations on quackery, &c. No. II.—Whitehead's essence of mustard [105]
Analysis of mineral waters, from Henry's Chemistry [111]
Further information relative to the decomposition of the alkalies [142]
Jenite, a new mineral [146]
Sensible heat excited in fluids by agitation [146]
Dupuytren's experiments on respiration, &c. [147]
Prize medals offered by the Humane Society of Philadelphia [148]
University of Pennsylvania, medical commencement in the [149]
Lectures in Columbia college [152]
Potash a triple compound [153]

page

Brown's system of medicine retracted in Germany [153]

Rush's theory of the liver, &c. translated into French [153]

Correspondence.—Vindication of Dr. Hamm, in a letter from Dr. Alexander to the editor [154]

Letter from Dr. Hamm to the editor of the Museum of Delaware [157]

History of diseases, &c. from ancient authors—Aretæus, No 3—On the acute diseases of the bladder [161]

Home, on the structure and uses of the spleen [165]

Phœnix, on electrical shocks [185]

Warnock, on adhesive straps in ulcers [186]

Perperes, on the nature of the acid formed in indigestion [187]

Lamb's apparatus for distilling sea water [188]

The earths ascertained to be metallic oxydes [188]

Leg's contrivance to discharge superfluous water [189]

Review; Planter's and Mariner's Medical Companion [190]

Notice to correspondents [196]